

I put text next to each of the interfaces

Starting point would be the login in from there the users data would get sent to the user database, a provided interface would be account recovery(forgot password) from the the profile setup depends on the user login/registration the preferences from profile set up is then sent to the roommate finder database which stores the preferences (required) once you you set up your profile you then have access to the roommate matching algorithm, the search and fitlering (which depends on the algorithm) from there the messaging system and the search filtering interact with each other based on your search and filtering it changes who you can message
